REAL ESTATE FORUM

PARTNERSHIP OPPORTUNITIES

NOVEMBER 20, 2026 · NEW YORK CITY

CONFIDENTIAL

Two mature markets. Two different languages.

Brazil and the United States both have deep, sophisticated real estate markets. Brazilian developers build at scale and know how to deliver through high interest rates and volatile cycles. American real estate has spent decades turning buildings into an asset class that pension funds, endowments and sovereign wealth funds buy with confidence.

Both markets are advanced, and they work in very different ways. Contracts, reporting, capital structures, the role of the public sector, even the definition of a good deal: almost every layer follows its own rules. That distance has a cost. Brazilian projects that would hold up anywhere often fail to reach global institutional capital, and the reason is rarely the return. They are hard to read from the outside.

The BR/USA Real Estate Forum was created to shorten that distance. For one day in New York, people who build, finance and regulate real estate in both countries sit in the same room and compare notes openly, looking for what each side can improve.

Copying the American model is not the point. The useful question is which internal practices Brazil can update, in governance, transparency, risk presentation and capital structuring, so that global institutional investors can come in with the same ease they find in other markets.

I hope you will join us in New York.

Rodrigo Rocha

PARTNER, OSPA · RESPONSIVE CITIES INSTITUTE
CO-ORGANIZER, BR/USA REAL ESTATE FORUM

One of the world's largest real estate markets, hard to read from abroad.

Foreign money keeps arriving in Brazil. Very little of it reaches real estate, and global institutions own almost none of the market.

B3 · 2026

Bridging Brazil to the world's most mature real estate market.

80 hand-picked leaders of Brazilian real estate (CEOs, CIOs, developers and fund managers) come to New York to learn from, and trade notes with, the professionals who set the global standard in governance, capital structuring and institutional transparency. Co-organized by Responsive Cities Institute (OSPA) and NYU Schack Institute of Real Estate.

This is the inaugural edition. The plan is to reach 150+ attendees in 2027 and make the forum the annual reference point for cross-border real estate between Brazil and the United States.

Two days.
One ecosystem.

The forum anchors a concentrated week of real estate programming in New York. Partners gain visibility across the whole program, beyond a single event.

MERCATUS CENTER · KEYNOTE

PANEL 1
9:30 – 10:20

Reading a Market: Country, Land, Deal

Global capital reads a deal in three layers: the country, the land under it, and the contract itself. Brazil answers the first and goes quiet on the other two. What would an investor need to see on the page?

PANEL 4
14:20 – 15:10

Affordability: Subsidy, Cost and Capital

Between what it costs to build and what a renter can pay, there is a gap. At the bottom of the market, the US closes it with tax credits and vouchers. In the middle, workforce housing has no subsidy and has to close it through construction cost, unit design and project finance. What each path asks of the developer, and what Brazil can take from it.

From Selling Units to Owning Income

Brazil builds to sell. The income model asks the same developer to keep the building, operate it and report on it for decades. That is a different company, not a different product. What the shift costs in capital, in operations and in reporting.

Four reasons to partner with the inaugural edition.

01

Institutional association

Your name next to NYU Schack and Responsive Cities Institute: the credibility of two institutions, not of a conference brand.

02

Curated access

Direct access to 80 senior decision-makers from the US and Brazil, in a room sized for relationships.

03

The founder's seal

A place as an institutional bridge between Brazil and the US at the forum's first edition. Later editions cannot offer that position.

04

Thought leadership

Authorship and presence in the co-branded post-event report, which circulates in both markets.

Let's build this together.

Partnership positions are limited and allocated in order of confirmation. Happy to talk through which tier fits your firm's goals.
